

PRACTICAL SAVINGS

In Mens and Boys
Clothing and Furnishing.

That's the story briefly told but it's good news to Men whose Clothing bill is always going on. We clip off a good part of the price but in no wise at any Sacrifice of Quality.

Our CUSTOMERS who know us know what a liberal proposition this is, every one ought to.

We make this cut in PRICE in order that we may have as little Winter Goods as possible to pack, and also to make room for the handsomest, and highest class line of

Furnishings AND Clothing

Ever brought on here. Permit us to call attention to the fact that you gain nothing by delay, as we cannot cut prices any lower, even later in the season. You still have time to wear out a winter suit at a big reduction in price.

The Recital.

Mrs. Vines and her music class had a fine audience at the opera house last Friday night and the program was well executed. The dumb-bell drill was splendid, eight girls keeping perfect time. The bells however were not dumb and the jingle added beauty and harmony to the scene. Several of the girls performed on the piano without their music. Mr. Hughes of Jefferson sang several songs and was encored every time.—Citizens Journal, Atlanta, Jan. 12, '05.

WITH ENGINEERS', AND IN CHARGE OF TWO TANN YARDS.

In your issue of Oct. 15, in this column, I stated I would say something about being connected with the engineers in charge of Lieut. Von Bulow, a German officer, who offered his service to the Confederate government, and was ordered to Alexandria, La., to build a fort between the falls above Alexandria and Red River. Our Regiment, the Crescent, from New Orleans, was camped below the falls across the River from Alexandria, and being well acquainted in Alexandria with Mr. and Mrs. Fellows of the Ice House hotel I got acquainted with Lieut. Von Bulow, who was a brother of the present prime minister of Germany, Count Von Bulow. Lieut. Von Bulow could only speak a broken English and said, "You is the very man I want," and had me detailed from the Regiment and put me in charge of 200 men in building the parapet walls of the fort, while he was there in person all day he was a jolly fellow, and I think the people of the South should honor such men as Prince Poliznac commanding a Brigade at the battle of Mansfield and the Swiss Genl. Zollroffer, who was killed near Nashville, Tenn., and Lt. Von Bulow and Lt. Dick Dowling, and others, who offered their services and life to the Southern Confederacy. About the time the fort was completed and ready for guns there came an order from Genl. Kirby Smith, any one in his command knowing anything about Tannery report at once to Col. Brand Chief of ordnance at Shreveport. Of course I had to report, as having learned that trade from 1850 to 1853, in Germany before I came to this country, so Col. Brand ordered me to Ville Plat or Flatown, 20 miles west of Oppalouas, to take charge of two Tann yards and employ all the help I needed and get out the leather. There was about 80 vats of leather from 30 to 40 sides in each vat. I succeeded in getting leather out of 65 vats and sent the leather to Shreveport as fast as I got it out but Genl. Banks Cavalry got within three miles of the Tann yard, and I reported ordnance department what leather I had sent, and Col. Brand thanked me kindly for what I had done as the ordnance department was entirely out of leather until I sent them some.

In my next I will write and give the history of the battle of Mansfield, where our hero, Genl. Dick Taylor violated Kirby Smith's orders and drove Banks army to the Mississippi river. In the battle of Mansfield my Regiment, the Crescent from New Orleans, went in the fight being the center Regiment of Mantons Brigade with 347 men, and in two hours fighting we came out with 91, losing our color bearer from Kingston, La., Lt. Col. Clark from New Orleans, and Maj. Canfield from Alexandria, and lost 8 men with our colors. Genl. Montones was also killed, and my company (C) of the Crescent Regiment of which I was Color Sergeant, went in the fight with 54 men, and in two hours fighting came out with 9 men, my captain wounded, also my first Lt. and our second Lt. killed and I was lucky enough in coming out with a minnie ball in my face, which was cut out of my back.

How about the Japs and Russian war? There is no war in history that can beat our family or (Civil) war. Why in the battle of Shiloh one of our Brigades went in the battle with 2267 and came out with 52. I am astonished to hear people say that the Jap and Russian war is the greatest in history. I say no, and will prove it by some official reports. If we had improved guns as they have now instead of our guns, shotguns, muskets and muzzle-loading guns, our Civil war would not have lasted 4 years if it had there would not have been a Union or Confederate soldier left.

In my next I will say more about the battle of Mansfield, also give you the correspondence between Jeff. Davis and Gen. Dick Taylor, his brother-in-law, and Gen. Kirby Smith, which I got from my friend, S. Peck of New Orleans, and belonging to my Regiment and who was Gen. Dick Taylor's private secretary and formerly book keeper for the big cotton house, of Carroll, Hay & Co., of New Orleans.
Yours truly,
JNO. A. FIEDLER.

Difference in Quality Makes Difference in Price.

Whenever you find goods that are sold for less than ours; you will find that the quality is of a different standard. We buy in large quantities—save discounts and freights. And sell large quantities of goods—we sell you the best goods for the least money.

One More Sad Death.

Died Jan. 17th, 1905; pure little Ertest Maxwell, the daughter of Charlie and Jennie Maxwell from us has gone to that resting place where there will not be any sorrow. But, oh! how sad it was to give her up the way she had to go. She caught afire, we know not how. Her father was clearing near the house and her mother was milking, and before they could get to her her clothes were all burned off except her shoes and stockings; she only lived about two hours. May God's blessings rest upon the bereaved parents to bear it, and may God help us all to live so that we may meet her some day.

Comet Cannery.

On Tuesday the JIMP. received through J. D. Hall a can of blackberries, peaches and tomatoes with the compliments of the Comet Cannery, J. O. Jackson proprietor. The cans had fine colored labels and presented a nice appearance, while the contents were as nice as you could wish, filled with Marion Co. grown fruit and vegetables. The JIMPLECUTE, believing in patronizing home enterprises, has always favored home canned fruit. Major Jackson has a small cannery yet he puts up a large amount of canned goods.
